Beautiful Vienna.

Barney Taylor, in writing about Vienna, declared some eight years ago that the day was not far distant when it would be admitted to be the handsomest city in the world—that it was the most beautiful and the most comfortable place in the world.

He declared that there was a thoroughfare in the civilized world combining so many brilliant attractions as the Ringstrasse and its diverging streets. It extends for nearly five miles, making a circuit of the old city, and having a width greater than that of Eutaw place, with lines of trees and promenades down the center.

Some of the most beautiful buildings in the world are to be seen in the Ringstrasse, and they have been erected with a lavish expenditure and the employment of the best architectural skill that Europe could furnish.

These tall and elaborately ornamental buildings, following each other in a continuous succession, mostly to the height of six stories, each rivaling the other in the display of architectural skill and taste, presents the appearance of a series of massive public buildings or palaces, rather than private residences, hotels, and places of business.

The upper stories are occupied by numerous families, the first people in the city living in these "flats," and paying enormous rents for suits of apartments. It is this mode of living that makes the coffee-houses and restaurants so numerous in Vienna, as very few families take evening meals at home.

Paris is handsomely and comfortably furnished, and the families at the restaurants or public gardens, where the best hands of music are in attendance, and take their dinners, when the weather will permit, in the open air.

Each suit of apartments has, however, all the accommodations for thorough comfort and convenience. The rooms are on one floor. The much-admired buildings that line the boulevards of Paris are all alike, and divide into commonplace structures in comparison with those of the Ringstrasse, as there is no uniformity in style here, no sameness that wearies the eye, but curiosity and ornamentation and design.

The new Bourse is nearly double the size of the immense Paris Bourse, and everything is on a grand scale. The new House of Parliament will, when completed, be a grand and imposing structure, as will be the Museum of Art and the Academy of Science and Arts, which are being constructed on either side of it—exceeding in size and ornamentation any similar buildings in the world.

That it is destined to be the most beautiful and attractive city in the world there can be no doubt. Paris is handsomely and comfortably furnished, and the families at the restaurants or public gardens, where the best hands of music are in attendance, and take their dinners, when the weather will permit, in the open air.

The Glorious Fourth.

GRAND OUTPOURING OF RICHMOND PEOPLE TO THE RURAL DISTRICTS IN HONOR OF AMERICAN INDEPENDENCE—RICHMOND, FRIDAY MORNING, JULY 5, 1878.

YESTERDAY WAS AN OLD-FASHIONED Fourth of July, so far as the weather was concerned, if not in other respects. The sun was dazzling in its brilliancy and blazing in its glory.

Business was very generally suspended, and the places where ice-cream and cooling drinks were sold. The few other houses open offered their goods in vain to perspiring excursionists or impetuous freedmen, who formed the great bulk of the people on the streets yesterday.

Our folks crowded all the trains and boats leaving the city in the morning. They rose with the lark, hurried on their starved shirts, felt in their pockets for their tickets, and in hot haste dashed off from their homes to have a (hot) day of it. Every avenue of escape from the city to "the green fields and shady trees of the country" was lined.

Nothing was even so common as to see a great approach to unanimity decided that "a decent respect" for the natal day of American independence required them to close business; to leave their comfortable homes, palm-leaf fans, and feed drinks, and seek for happiness and coolness on railroad-cars, except rivers and canal-boats, a creature can find out. But after all, it was just as sensible as "the old style" where there were windy Fourth-of-July orators, firing of cannon, parade of military, and patriotic toasts, followed by headaches and some sunstroke or other such much profane and the one as the other.

It was a tired mass of human beings which came back to the city last night. Yet there were not many regrets expressed. The chief object of an excursion (say some fretful people) is that the fellow who goes to the sun or even up by cities, may tell the stay-at-home (who has had a good dinner and a really cool and quiet time). "Oh! it was so nice; you just ought to have been along"; or, "You missed a good thing by not going with us." And the recipient of these commiserating remarks then begins to regret that he did not go.

There was a large attendance, including a number of the "base-ball" players, who witnessed the match-game of base-ball between the R. E. Lee Club, of Portsmouth, and the Atlantic Club, of this city. It was about 4 o'clock when the game was called, with the Portsmouth boys in the field.

ford and family on this 4th day of July, 1878, having been the recipients of so much good hospitality at the hands of the donors of the Dollar Savings Bank on Monday. The bank suspended in 1873, and two or three years ago the first dividend (ten per cent.) was paid. The dividend now about to be paid is the second one.

MANCHESTER AND VICINITY.
The Fourth of July—How it was Spent—Fun on Sharp's Island. There was no general suspension of business yesterday, but for all practical purposes that might as well have been, as but little was done; and in the afternoon the stores, with few exceptions, closed their doors. On the water-lin operations were entirely suspended, and the railroad and other work-shops, the Bank of Manchester, and the post-office, were closed. A large number of persons joined in the many excursions of the day, and after 10 A. M. Manchester presented the appearance of Goldenrod's Deserted Village.

A large number of our people accompanied the Presbyterian Sabbath school on its excursion to Lindsey's farm, on the canal. A pleasant day was spent, and all expressed themselves as highly gratified with the trip. The picnic at Waymire (Richmond) was also a very successful and highly enjoyable. The colored Baptist Sunday school spent the day in a most pleasant manner at Chesterfield Park. There were a number of family picnics, and several pleasure parties from Richmond passed through the city en route for the rural spots of Chesterfield, the old Courthouse, Chester, Providence, Salem, and Swift Creek, picnics were had and the day celebrated in becoming style. But by far the finest celebration of the day in this vicinity was that of the R. E. Lee Club at Sharp's Island.

This Club yesterday celebrated its twelfth anniversary with a grand picnic and cotton-sole. Manchester contributed some of the flowers of her beauty and chivalry, the old First Ward carrying the banner. The music of Fell Ranges, Irbey Andrews, and Orrin Bass was excellent, George Sharp's dinner was superb, and the day was spent in enjoyment, and with many expressions of appreciation to the host and hostess.

A STATE AFFAIR.
The newboys of the State were treated by their employers to a pleasant excursion to the Petersburg railroad to Falling creek, and a picnic on the banks of that historic and romantic stream. The boys had a splendid time bathing, fishing, romping, and eating. The Fourth of July will not soon be forgotten by them. They wouldn't care if it came once a month or oftener.
